ANNUAL REPORTS

OF THE

WAR DEPARTMENT

FOR THE

FISCAL YEAR ENDED JUNE 30, 1904.

VOLUME III.

REPORTS OF DIVISION AND DEPARTMENT COMMANDERS.

WASHINGTON:
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.
1904.

respectfully invited to my report on the adaptability of the two reservations, Forts Sill and Reno, Okla., for maneuver purposes, which was forwarded to the Chief of Staff under date of April 1, 1904. By reason of their location, extent, topographical features, and their accessibility it is believed that they possess qualifications rendering them desirable sites for maneuvers. Utilizing both reservations and the country between them, which is sparsely settled, would give opportunity for maneuvering two forces against each other over considerable distances. With a view to utilizing these reservations, I have had them both surveyed under the direction of the engineer officer of the division, Capt. John C. Oakes, General Staff. If it is considered advisable to hold the maneuvers at a point farther south, the country north of San Antonio, Tex., generally known as Leon Springs, possesses many advantages for this purpose, and the experience gained by concentration of troops at San Antonio, Tex., might prove of great practical advantage. This matter will be taken up more fully in future correspondence with the department upon the specific subject of combined maneuvers.

It is the intention of the governors of the several States and Territories within this division to hold camps of instruction during the coming summer and fall. It is my desire, under War Department authority, to furnish them with such assistance in the matter of regular forces to camp with them and officers to furnish instruction as the resources of the division and the demands of other duties will permit.

MILITARY POSTS.

While all the details of military posts, as to their personnel, conditions, and requirements, as related to the various supply departments, the instruction of garrisons, etc., is presumably made the subject of department commanders' reports, as well as all movements of troops and military operations, a few remarks and recommendations may not be out of place.

FORT HUACHUCA.

This important frontier post is suffering from a limited water supply. During the summer an average of 59,000 gallons per diem is available. This is insufficient for the present garrison without exercising the strictest economy, to the extent of stopping all use upon grass, trees, and gardens. At an expenditure of $12,000 (estimated) an additional supply could be obtained from an adjacent canyon ample for all requirements of the garrison.

It is advisable to have a large post in this vicinity, but before any increase is considered the desirability of changing the location to Tanners Canyon and the question of increasing the water supply should be carefully investigated.

FORT GRANT.

The question of the water supply at this post has been frequently before the department. It is believed impracticable to depend upon the mountain drainage for this purpose—the area is too limited. It is believed, however, that water may be obtained in abundance
